

What is a braindate?

Braindate is your opportunity to crowdsource the knowledge of those around you and share your own. It's a solution that helps people learn from one another and build lasting relationships. Use the Braindate platform to host or join one-on-one or small group discussions about topics on your mind. Explore EdTechX >

How does it work?

Explore the Topic Market, where you can browse topics others have posted related to knowledge they'd like to share or subjects they'd like to discuss. This is also where you'll post topics for others to book.

One-on-One topics: 20 minutes. book your meetings based on your availability and that of the interested person.

Group topics: 45 minutes. Organize your group discussions in advance based on your availability or book a spot in discussions hosted by others.

When it's time for your Braindate meeting(s), make your way to the Braindate Lounge where our Learning Concierges will check you in and introduce you to your braindates. Skip the small talk and enjoy meaningful conversations based on subjects and ideas most relevant to you.

Connect, share, learn. Whether you're discussing an idea or a concern, sharing your expertise or best practices, or getting feedback on a new product or service, you'll benefit from making the most of the collective knowledge of like-minded peers
